

My wife and I are both extremely tired of fielding harrassing phone calls from unsolicited telemarketers. They call at what in our home with a small child is beyond an accepatable time. I would encourage you to leave the NJ do not law intact with no changes. I work for a company that has previously never called a customer for marketing purposes. But not sad to say with the federal loop hole, we will be allowed to contact even those customers whom we have done business with. which will result in lost revenue for the company from a small percentage of our customer. So by leaving the NJ do not call law intact, you will be saving companies from losing business.
